

The Philippines' New President: Benigno "Noy" Simeon Cojuangco Aquino III

Benigno Simeon Cojuangco Aquino, III (born February 8, 1960) also known as Noy Aquino, is the fifteenth and incumbent President of the Philippines, after convincingly winning by wide margin the presidential elections held last 10 May 2010.

Aquino is a fourth-generation politician: his great-grandfather, Servillano "Mianong" Aquino, served as a delegate to the Malolos Congress; his grandfather, Benigno Aquino, Sr., held several

RP INDEPENDENCE CELEBRATED WITH TWO BIG EVENTS IN GREECE

The Philippine Embassy marked the 112th anniversary of the proclamation of Philippine independence with two major, well-attended events in Athens: a fiesta-type celebration with the Filipino community at the Fokianos basketball court at Zappeio on 06 June 2010 and a Diplomatic Reception for the diplomatic corps at the prestigious King George Palace on 11 June 2010, both in central Athens.

The whole-day celebration with the Filipino community at Zappeio began with the parade of banners of various Filipino community associations in Greece and the singing of the Philippine national anthem. His Excellency Ambassador Rigoberto D. Tiglao led Philippine

Ambassador meets with Athens Mayor Kaklamanis

Ambassador Rigoberto Tiglao met with Athens Mayor Nikitas Kaklamanis 6 July at the Mayor's office to discuss the welfare of Filipinos in Athens, where most of them reside and work.

Ambassador Tiglao was accompanied by celebrity Ilias Psinakis and his brother Yorgos Psinakis, both of whom have been active in developing relations between Greece and the Philippines.

The mayor handed to the ambassador his formal invitation for the Mayor of Manila Alfredo Lim to visit Athens in the fall to sign a protocol establishing Athens and Manila as sister cities. The Mayor expressed his admiration for the Filipino community in Athens, whom he said he has the highest respect for. ■

SPECIAL FEATURE

A Filipino Sushi Chef at Ledra Marriott Hotel-Athens

The following article was featured in the Winter 2010 issue of "Roots & Wings," a magazine for Filipinos in Europe, published by Rachel Publishing Co.

Famous and celebrated chefs have started from scratch – from just a mere name to become a renowned cuisine guru; rising from nothing to something big – like Mario Batali and Bobby Flay. Chef Mario Batali started as a dishwasher at "Stuff Yer Face Restaurant" in New Jersey, and Chef Bobby Flay started as a cook in an eatery. The Naked Chef Jamie Oliver at age 8 was a vegetable peeler at his dad's restaurant, the Cricketers. At 16, he decided to study at Westminster Catering College and went to France to get more experience before going back to London and becoming the famous chef he is now. Others started as sous chef for chefs with names in high end hotel establishments.

This Filipino Chef, only 20 years old, is a young man which exudes the appearance of a person who seemed to have lived a pampered and blissful life. He lives alone in his flat in Glyfada, located 45 minutes away by car in the southern part of Athens. This young fellow carries a healthy physique, about 5'5 in height, with a bright and cheery attitude, always ready to flash that instant smile; a guy that struck me as a young Mario Batali: jolly, charming, sensible and confident.

Chef John Levi Reano, a fortunate and lucky man indeed, John was given the opportunity to study and finished at the prestigious Alpine Center: the Swiss Business School for Hotel and Tourism Education in Greece with a Swiss Diploma in Culinary Arts. He graduated with distinction and was given the Academic and Professional Excellence in Culinary Arts in 2007. A consistent top student of his batch, John is the first and only Filipino to graduate in this exclusive Culinary Arts School in Athens. John's first industry training was at Porto Elounda De Luxe Resort, a luxury golf-and-spa-resort in Crete Island, under the tutelage of chefs Jean Charles Metayer and Michalis Kontes. His second training was at 5-star Ledra Marriott Hotel where he gained the admiration of the Executive Chef that soon after finishing his training, he was offered a full time employment.

Now, John is the only Filipino Chef employed by the Ledra Marriott Hotel. He is the sushi chef at the Kona Kai Restaurant that serves Polynesian and Japanese cuisine and caters to well-heeled Greeks and expatriates. The hotel pays him a good starting salary with satisfactory perks. He is admired and well liked by his fellow chefs and gets along well with the others – from the restaurant Manager to sous chefs because of his talent and pleasant and sunny disposition.

John tells me about his childhood in Batangas and how he grew up to realize how fortunate he was to have lived a life that had very strong supportive structures centered in the family. The Reano household is a typical Filipino family where the father works abroad to provide for the family and the children's education. John is the youngest child of Domingo and Natividad Reano. Domingo is a former overseas contract worker in Saudi Arabia while Natividad stayed at home to take care of the children. Domingo, then in his mid 50's and having saved a little, decided to retire in their house in Tanauan, Batangas. Soon thereafter, Chef John was conceived when his mother was in her late 40s. Thus, little John Reano was born on October 8, 1988.

Early on, John attended elementary and finished at the Bernardo Lirio Elementary School. He spent his high school at the La Consolacion College in Tanauan, Batangas. Thanks to the kindness and support of John's elder sister, then a nurse in Switzerland, who paid for his high school education. John also attributes the blessings that came his way to the generosity of his Greek born brother-in-law who had encouraged and inspired him to pursue his passion and ambition and supported him all the way as if he were his own son. His brother-in-law who is in shipping business met and married his sister when she was working in Switzerland as a nurse.

Chef John is delighted to have his friends (of different nationalities) around, pleased with his independence and thankful for his family and work at Ledra Marriott. When asked for his plans for the future: "I want to pursue another Diploma for my career in the business. I want to travel around the world to have a better understanding of the world and to experience and explore the different cultures and cuisines." And for all the good blessings that came his way, John says, "I would like to be able to own and operate my own restaurant to open up opportunities and give jobs to my fellow Filipinos. I think this is the best gesture and way that I could think of to give back what I had received and to thank those people dear to me who molded me into the person I turned out to be."

That's Chef John – our Filipino Chef. ■

legislative positions from 1919-44; and his parents were former President Corazon Aquino and former Senator Benigno "Ninoy" Aquino, Jr. Aquino is a member of the Liberal Party.

Born in Manila, Aquino graduated from Ateneo de Manila University in 1981 and joined his family in their exile in the United States shortly thereafter. He returned to the Philippines in 1983 shortly after the assassination of his father and held several positions working in the private sector. In 1998, he was elected to the House of Representatives as Representative of the 2nd district of Tarlac province.

He was subsequently re-elected to the House in 2001 and 2004. In 2007, having been barred from running for re-election to the House due to the term limit, he was elected to the Senate in the 14th Congress of the Philippines.

President Noynoy Aquino.

Following the death of his mother on August 1, 2009, many people began calling on Aquino to run for president. On September 9, 2009, Aquino officially announced he would be a candidate in the 2010 presidential election, held on May 10, 2010.

On June 9, 2010, the Congress of the Philippines proclaimed Aquino the winner of the 2010 presidential election.

On June 30, 2010, at the Quirino Grandstand in Rizal Park, Manila, Aquino was sworn into office as the fifteenth President of the Philippines, succeeding Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. ■

First Awardee of the Ambassador's Scholarship Program

Ambassador Tiglao congratulating first scholar Eden Mae Castillo, with her mother Lilia.

Eden Mae M. Castillo, college freshman, is the first awardee of the Philippine Ambassador's scholarship under an agreement signed two months ago by University of Indianapolis (Athens campus) Chancellor Vasilis Botopoulos and Ambassador Rigoberto Tiglao.

The Philippine Ambassador's Scholarship provides for a 70% tuition assistance to a Filipino for an undergraduate college degree at the prestigious University of Indianapolis (Athens Campus) upon recommendation of the ambassador. In order to sustain the scholarship the student has to consistently maintain an average grade of B.

Eden, as she is fondly called by her friends and teachers, is an alumna of the Philippine School in Greece-Katipunan Philippine Cultural Academy, who as a student was very active in the school's cultural activities. She was a member of the Kabataang Tinig Choir and the PSG Dance Troupe.

She also served as the president of the student council in 2007-2008. Her teachers had glowing praises of her as a smart, diligent and responsible student who also has good leadership skills.

Already considered an above-average student at the University in the first semester, Ambassador remarked that Eden is a 'living proof' of the quality of education provided by the Philippine School in Greece (Kaphilca)

Eden says she is looking forward to taking either A.B. Psychology or Arts and Communications degree. Eden's early impressions of her new school are that of an excellent and ideal place to learn, but also a community composed of administrators, teachers, and fellow students who are very friendly and helpful.

Eden Mae M. Castillo was born on March 09, 1991 in Antipolo City, Philippines. She is the eldest daughter of Mr. Eduardo Bruce Castillo and Mrs. Lilia

M. Castillo and a sister to Despina Joy Castillo.

The University of Indianapolis-Athens is not merely a franchise or a branch of the American university. It is academically and legally categorized as a campus of the university.

One of UINDY's campuses in central Athens

The other forms of "Ambassador's Scholarships" Ambassador Tiglao had arranged with the University of Indianapolis (Athens Campus) include five undergraduate scholarships providing for a 25% tuition assistance and another five graduate-school scholarships also providing a 25% tuition assistance.

In addition to these "Ambassador's Scholarships", the MOU provides for a General undergraduate scholarships which will grant a 20% tuition assistance for undergraduate studies for a child or spouse of an employee of the Philippine Embassy and the Philippine School in Greece as well as for a graduate of the Philippine School in Greece.

There is also a General graduate scholarship program which provides for a 20% tuition assistance for graduate studies of an employee, child or spouse of the Philippine Embassy and the Philippine School employee at UINDY Athens. ■

A huge marquee and three big tents covered the venue as protection from the sun and rain. Athens News, the Philippine Embassy's communications sponsor for this event, distributed free newspapers and flyers during the event. Coca Cola, Emirates Airlines and the Accredited Community Partners (ACP) served as the major sponsors for the Filipino community event.

The different Filipino organizations showed off their rich and colorful costumes during the parade. Students of the Philippine School in Greece (formerly known as KAPHILCA or Katipunan Philippines Cultural Academy) and representatives of various Filipino organizations performed cultural numbers consisting of songs and dances on the stage specifically built and assembled by the embassy for the cultural presentations.

Known Filipino singer Ms Tina Paner sponsored by Globe Asiatique sang during the occasion.

Over 1,000 people, Filipinos, Greeks and other foreign citizens participated in this year's Independence Day celebration at Zappeio.

About 350 guests from the diplomatic corps, Greek officialdom and business led by one of Greece's biggest shipping company Tsakos attended the diplomatic reception hosted by Ambassador Rigoberto D. Tiglao and Mrs. Getsy Tiglao in the grand ballroom of the King George Palace. Mayor of Athens Nikitas Kaklamanis, A10 Director Ambassador Haralambos Dafaranos and Deputy Chief of Protocol Kyriakos Amiridis and Director of the Diplomatic Office of the Parliament President Ambassador Ioannis Christofilis led Greek senior officials who attended the embassy's

Diplomatic Reception

The embassy also invited to the reception leaders of the various Filipino community organizations in Greece.

The reception served a combination of western and Filipino cuisine which the embassy's foreign guests appreciated very much. They partook of the sumptuous feast of native Filipino dishes such as adobo, fried vegetable lumpia, longganisa, barbecue, buchi, siopao, puto and leche flan.

Filipino music played throughout the event and a video presentation on Philippine culture and economy ran for the duration of the reception. Tourism brochures and other information materials were also given to the guests.

Greece's premier Star Channel together with its famous television personality Ilias Psinakis arrived to interview Ambassador Tiglao. ■

CONSULAR UPDATES

DFA Passport Services Commence at New Building

The Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) wishes to inform the public that beginning on March 8, passport services will commence at a new building located at the corner of Bradco and Macapagal Avenues in Aseana Business Park, near the Mall of Asia.

The new telephone numbers at this building are the following: (02)737-1000, (02) 831-8971, (02) 551-4437, (02) 551-4402, (02)834-4855 and (02) 834-4424.

To ensure quick, comfortable service, passport applicants are advised to check the passport requirements and secure an online appointment at www.passport.com.ph or call (02)737-1000. Applications may also be filed with the DFA's 19 Regional Consular and satellite offices.

Applicants are no longer required to bring photographs since they will have their pictures taken using ePassport data capturing machines at the new building.

They still need to bring other necessary requirements such as the application form that is available for download at the DFA website and at the reception desks of the new consular building.

Only those with confirmed appointments will be accommodated at the new facility. No escorts are allowed to accompany individual applicants at this time.

The new 7,000-square meter, four-storey building is a few blocks away from the DFA main building.

The new building is part of the ongoing modernization program undertaken by Foreign Affairs Secretary Alberto G. Romulo to further improve the DFA's frontline services which include harnessing new technologies in passport and visa issuances and streamlined procedures in the authentication of documents.

It is part of our dream for the Filipino people to have a world-class passport and consular services. We have done it through the Machine Readable Passport (MRP) and the ePassport, and now the dream is complete with the new DFA-Office of Consular Affairs building," he said.

DFA., PDEA Take Decisive Action on 'Drug Mules'

Foreign Affairs Undersecretary for Migrant Workers' Affairs Esteban B. Conejos, Jr. said the Philippines is undertaking comprehensive and proactive measures to address the 'drug mules' issue and prevent the further victimization of Filipinos by international drug syndicates.

"We are working in partnership with the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) on the operational law enforcement aspects, as well as with authorities in our neighboring countries, Usec. Conejos stated in a joint press conference with Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) Director General Dionisio R. Santiago held at the PDEA in Quezon City. This is the first joint press conference between the two agencies on the 'drug mules' issue.

On the recommendation of the DFA, President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo signed Administrative Order (AO) No. 279, which created the Drug Couriers Task Force (TFDC), tasked to prevent Filipinos being used as drug couriers by international drug trafficking syndicates last February 8.

The TFDC is composed of the PDEA as chair; the DFA as co-chair; and the Department of Labor and Employment, the Bureau of Immigration, the Bureau of Customs, the National Bureau of Investigation, the Philippine Information Agency, the Manila International Airport Authority, and the Philippine Tourism Authority as members.

The Task Force is developing and executing programs and strategies against the recruitment of Filipinos as international drug couriers by international drug trafficking syndicates that victimize overseas Filipinos, and promoting close coordination among government agencies towards a more aggressive apprehension and prosecution of members of drug trafficking syndicates operating in the Philippines.

Moreover, the TFDC closely coordinates with counterpart agencies of other countries for the formulation and execution of bilateral or regional actions against recruitment of Filipinos as drug couriers.

Meanwhile, Usec. Conejos reminds Filipinos must be extra wary of accepting offers from individuals or groups to carry illegal drugs in their luggage or in their person when going abroad, as harsh penalties await them in their destinations.

"We warn our countrymen not to accept packages which they suspect are drugs. If they are caught carrying illegal drugs, they will face very dire consequences," he said.

In China, drug trafficking of 50 grams or more of illegal drugs is punishable by 15 years in prison, life imprisonment or death. In Muslim countries, drug trafficking is punishable by death, according to Shariah law.

Usec. Conejos made this warning in the light of the recent executions of British and Japanese nationals for drug-related offenses in China.

"This action by the Chinese government in strictly implementing their laws should serve as a stern warning to those who have been victimizing Filipinos. It is also a reminder to our kababayans not to allow themselves to be willing victims for the sake of money," he added.

Currently, there are 197 drug-related cases in China. Six have been meted the death penalty without reprieve and 67 with death penalty with two-year reprieve. There are 35 cases given life imprisonment sentences, 56 with fixed-term imprisonment and 33 pending cases.

Among the six death penalty cases without reprieve, two are with the People's Supreme Court and four are with the Court of Appeals.

The DFA continues to extend its assistance to those in death row within the bounds of due process and Chinese law. It is also encouraging those meted out the death penalty with chance of reprieve to strive for good behavior.

In death sentences without reprieve, decisions of lower courts are automatically elevated to the higher courts for review. The People's Supreme Court is the court of last resort before the judgment becomes final and executory. Source: DFA-PISU

18 Filipino crew members of MT Navios Napollon were freed unharmed by Somali pirates on February 27, 2010. The ship was sea-jacked on December 28, 2009, en route from the U.S. to India with a cargo of fertilizers. The seamen returned to the Philippines on March 5, 2010.

During the seamen's 60 days of captivity, the Philippine Overseas Labor Office (POLO) Labor Attaché George Eduvala and Tito Baldago, POLO Administrative Officer, were in constant touch with Ms. Angeliki Frangou, the CEO of Navios Maritime Holdings, Inc., the ship owner, and Mr. George Akasoukolus, the crew manager of InterOrient Maritime Enterprises, the ship management company, to ensure the safety and health of the crew and to speed up their release and repatriation.

Filipino seamen on the last hostaged Greek ship are home

The release of the crew marked the first time in the very long while when not a single Filipino seaman on board a Greek owned or managed ship is in the hands of Somali pirates.

On January 18, 2010, the 16 Filipino crewmembers of MV Maran Centaurus, a supertanker carrying US$140 million worth of crude oil – reputedly the richest booty in maritime history, were released. Nineteen more Filipino sailors on board MV Filitsa tasted freedom on February 1, 2010. In both cases, the POLO coordinated closely with the ship owners during talks for their release.

Nearly 20,000 ships pass through the Gulf of Aden – the pirates' lair – and the Suez Canal each year. Since the start of the year (2010), 42 piracy attacks resulting in 17 sea-jackings occurred. Thus, the Philippines has banned the deployment of Filipino seamen on ships traversing the Gulf and the Coast of Somalia since February 4, 2010. ■

OWWA MEMBERS GRADUATED FROM CAREGIVING LESSONS

In its effort to enhance and improve the skills of OFWs, a 20-hour session was offered for free by OWWA to its members. It ran from April to May, 2010 at the Filipino Workers and Resource Center in Sevastopouleus, Ambelokipi, Athens. The project was aimed at giving better employment opportunities to Filipinos, even in countries out of Greece like Canada and the United Kingdom.

Laughters, feeling of triumph and fulfillment could be sensed during the graduation ceremonies held on June 2, 2010. Graduates, guests, and mentors, shared to their delight, Filipino foods.

Trainings, like Greek language lessons, computer literacy, and entrepreneurship will be opened for free in July. All OWWA members are encouraged to take the courses and enroll. ■
